

Cartise Achieves Elegance in Process to Match Their Product with Momentis ERP

Montreal-based Cartise has been designing and manufacturing beautiful and unique women’s clothing for over 40 years. To streamline its operations, Cartise now uses the Momentis ERP across its business; from style design and production through inventory management and receivable tracking, and everything in-between.

Momentis recently sat down with Danya Padan, Cartise’s Operations Manager and Marketing Manager, to find out how implementing Momentis has changed their business.

In their ERP search, Cartise’s highest priority was adding efficiencies to their product development process, which they found with Momentis’ fully integrated PLM solution: “Before, we were doing everything manually” Danya recalled. “I would have spreadsheets or clipboards full of information for tracking the progress of each style. Now with Momentis PLM, I can use the work-in-progress tool to instantly understand the status of every style without any manual work.” Momentis PLM also enables Cartise to maintain all information related to design, development, and sampling in the same place, enhancing collaboration while reducing errors. Danya emphasized that “with PLM we save so much time. It is night and day compared to how we were working before.”

Cartise is not only innovative when it comes to fashion design; they are finding novel ways to use Momentis software to improve their business. After implementing the Momentis iOS Sales App across their sales force, Cartise recently put it to use at its warehouse sale. Danya explained how they setup a temporary showroom with samples so that “instead of having a warehouse sale where you bring all your inventory forward, we were able to offer more products to the customer in a more elegant way.”

The sales reps were equipped with iPads running the Momentis iOS Sales App, and when customers selected the items they wanted, after verifying the inventory was available in their desired size, picks were instantly generated so the shopping cart could be fulfilled by the warehouse. Danya explained how this was possible, noting that, “because the iOS app shows inventory levels in real-time, as soon as items were put on picks, they were deducted from the inventory that other reps saw as available. Whatever wasn’t purchased when customers checked out became immediately visible as available to sell again.” Cartise is the first Momentis client to report using the iOS sales app at a warehouse sale, and we are thrilled by the result.

The fashion industry is constantly in flux, and it is Momentis’ goal to offer the tools and services that our clients need to thrive in this ever-changing environment. We are ecstatic when we see our clients getting the most out of Momentis software and encouraged to receive such positive feedback from this incredible client.